

Journal in Urban and Regional Planning

Journal in Urban and Regional Planning is the official publication of the UP School of Urban and Regional Planning created for the purpose of disseminating scholarly insight on prevailing issues shaping our urban and rural systems to a wider audience. It is a peer reviewed journal geared towards elevating the practice of urban and regional planning professionals; most especially those engaged in the local planning arena.

The journal is a peer-reviewed annual publication managed by SURP's Research and Publications Division. The journal publishes articles concerned with urban and regional planning and its allied disciplines such as public works, transportation, real estate development, the environment- both built and natural; among others regardless of geographic context. It will be made available both online and in limited print formats so that the publication can reach a wider audience in the most convenient manner. The editors welcome contributions that:

- § Covers topics of immediate and long-term concern for the urban and regional planning practice in Philippines; and
- § Are grounded in sound theoretical and/or practical analytical frameworks

Authors are encouraged to express their interest through email. Please send the title and abstract of the article to:
